YOUR PARTNER IN OT

To Whom It May Concern –

I am writing to describe the nature of our business at Play2Learn, LLC. We are a pediatric occupational therapy practice. We provide services to children from birth to 18 years of age, with a range of disabilities such as autism and learning disabilities. The children that we service all receive OT services in their academic setting. However, parents seek us out to supplement what their children are receiving in school, for greater intensity of impact. Our services are academically based in that we address social issues, motor coordination deficits, and sensory processing difficulties that impact their ability to function in school. Our work helps to improve their abilities to sustain focus in the classroom, to interact with their peers and take direction from teachers, and to improve their skills such as handwriting, dressing, self-care. We provide classroom observations and consult with teachers regarding any accommodations that can be made to the classroom to facilitate performance. We also contract services out to private schools, where we have OT's working on site to provide our services. We do not perform any medical procedures or administer any medications.
