APPLICATION :: APPEAL INFORMATION

QUESTION 2. State the basis or grounds for contesting the decision, providing any information that you feel will aid the Board in its review of your appeal:

In June 2018, before finalizing the design of our family home, our Newton architect, Richard Levey, sent an email to Newton's Chief Zoning Code Official, Jane Santosuosso. He asked for confirmation that the front porch that he designed would not count towards the home's floor area for FAR purposes, and he provided a set of floor plans and elevations for her review. (See Exhibit A.) In his email, Mr. Levey explained as follows:

The design includes a covered entry that is unenclosed and facing the street. In my FAR calculations, I have not included the space as part of the square footage of the house since it unenclosed completely on the street side (not even railings). I wanted to make sure that it would not be interpreted as part of the house square footage for FAR purposes since it is recessed.

Ms. Santosuosso replied: "An open porch is not counted in the FAR. It should be fine." We moved forward with our plans. (See Exhibit B.)

When our builder applied for our building permit in October 2018, Deputy Commissioner/Plans Examiner Anthony Ciccariello said that our unenclosed front porch would be counted towards the floor area of our property, which would bring us slightly over the permissible FAR. We believe that this is an incorrect interpretation of the Zoning Ordinance.

After a discussion with our architect, Mr. Ciccariello agreed to exclude the porch from floor area if we replaced a portion of the porch roof with an open pergola. Our plans were approved with that modification in November 2018. (See Exhibit C.) Since then, however, we have grown increasingly uncomfortable with this ungainly compromise.

Whether roofed or not, our porch is not floor area under Newton's Zoning Ordinance. Section 1.5.5 explains that "floor area" is, fundamentally, the area enclosed within the walls of a building. Specifically, floor area is measured inward "from the exterior face of the exterior walls":

 Residential Districts. The sum of the floor area of all principal and accessory [sic] buildings whether or not habitable shall be taken from the exterior face of the exterior walls of each building without deduction for garage space, hallways, stairs, closets, thickness of walls, columns, atria, open wells and other vertical open spaces, or other features as defined in this Sec. 1.5.5, as defined below:

- a. Gross floor area shall include:
  - i. First and second stories:

- iv. Enclosed porches;
- v. Attached garages; . . .
- b. Gross floor area shall not include:
  - Unenclosed porches;

Because our porch is outside of the exterior walls, it would only count towards FAR if it is pulled in by some other provision.

I emailed Ms. Santosuosso in January 2019 to seek her guidance. She now explained that the porch does not technically meet the definition of a porch. She is correct. Under Section 8.3 of the Zoning Ordinance, our unenclosed porch is not a porch at all, since it shares "more than two exterior walls with the residential structure":

Porch: A roofed structure with sides not more than 60 percent enclosed by impermeable walls, attached to and accessible from the primary structure, and not heated or air conditioned. A porch may share no more than two exterior walls with the residential structure. Railings or solid walls on the projecting facades of the porch may be no higher than 36 inches as measured from the finished porch floor; the remainder of these facades may be open to the elements or enclosed by mesh, glass, or similar material.

Porch, Enclosed: A porch enclosed for any portion of the year by any non-permeable material such as glass or a similar material.

Porch, Unenclosed: A porch that at all times is either enclosed by permeable materials such as mesh or similar material or is unenclosed by any material.

To be clear, if our porch were a porch, it would be an unenclosed porch rather than an enclosed porch, since it is not "enclosed for any portion of the year by any non-permeable material." The result would be the same, since neither an unenclosed porch nor a "non-porch" outside the exterior walls is floor area.

Ms. Santosuosso ultimately deferred the decision to Commissioner Lojek. I emailed him on February 11, 2019, to request a ruling on this issue.

While I awaited Commissioner Lojek's decision, I had an opportunity to discuss the matter with Mr. Ciccariello. He explained that Inspectional Services counts our front porch towards floor area because it is covered by a roof. The Zoning Ordinance, however, defines floor area only with reference to the exterior walls of the structure, with no mention of a "roof." A roof is not relevant to the Ordinance's definition of floor area.

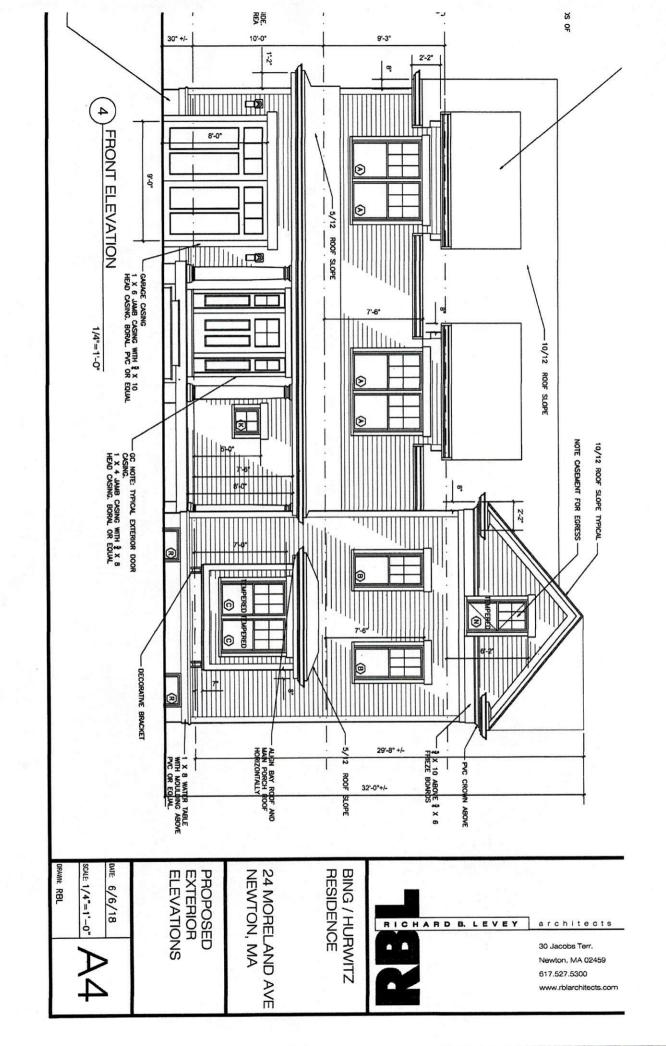

On February 27, 2019, Commissioner Lojek made his decision, and advised us that his department will count our porch towards the home's floor area. (See Exhibit D.)

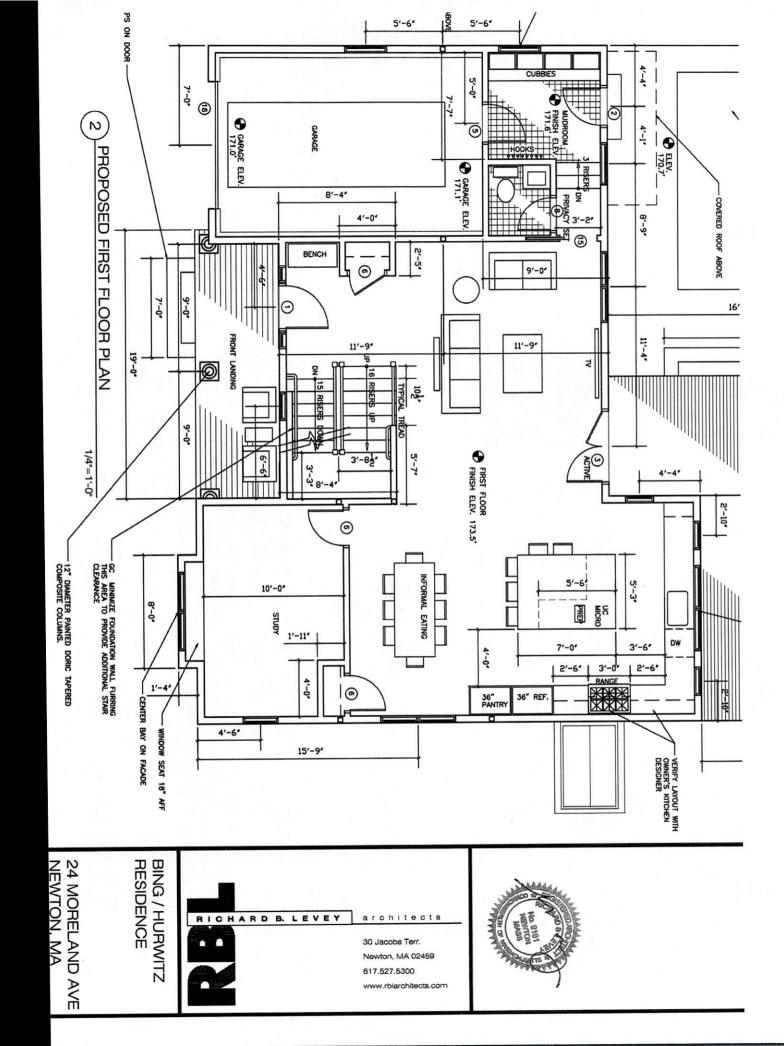

There is no dispute that our porch will be outside the exterior walls of the building. Nor is it disputed that the porch is not actually a "porch" under the Ordinance. To count it towards our home's floor area, therefore, would be to unfairly extend the Ordinance beyond its plain language.

We are not ones to debate the logic or fairness of the FAR concept itself; we accept that the code is the code. But as ardent rule-followers, we strongly feel that the city's residents — and their architects — should be able to rely on and act in accordance with the language of the Zoning Code.

have read your request and must respectfully disagree with your interpretation of section 1.5.5. For purposes of FAR, we have counted areas such as the area in question when it meets the parameters of the "porch" definition for that which is more than 60 percent enclosed by impermeable walls, attached to and accessible from the primary structure, and not neated or air conditioned."

f you want to appeal that decision you may do so by filing for an Appeal of the interpretation of the Commissioner to the Zoning Board of Appeals. You may also apply for a Special Permit for relief of FAR.

Hi, John.

NOTE: This is the email thread leading up to and including Commissioner Lojek's decision.

am following up on the voicemail that I left you this afternoon, to provide a bit more context about the zoning issue at 24 Moreland Avenue. I'm sure you are terribly busy, but we would greatly appreciate a quick decision, as it will impact our construction within the next week.

Here's where we are...

ast summer, before finalizing the design of our family home, architect Rich Levey emailed Jane Santosuosso to confirm hat the front porch that he designed would not count towards FAR. He provided a set of floor plans and elevations. Jane eplied: "An open porch is not counted in the FAR. It should be fine." We moved forward with our plans.

When we applied for the building permit a few months later, Anthony Ciccariello said that our unenclosed front porch hould be counted towards the Floor Area of our property, which would bring us over the permissible FAR. Anthony igreed to exclude the porch from FAR if we replaced a portion of the porch roof with an open pergola. Although this is what our plan currently provides, we would like to avoid this somewhat ungainly solution.

emailed Jane two weeks ago to get her input. She explained that the porch does not technically meet the definition of an unenclosed porch." Because the porch shares three walls with the structure, I have to agree with her: Common sense side, our unenclosed porch is not an "unenclosed porch" under the zoning code. In fact, as the ordinance is written, it is echnically not a "porch" at all, since it shares "more than two exterior walls with the residential structure."

but because this determination relies on a technical reading of the code, it seems clear that the porch absolutely does not onstitute Floor Area, either. It is plainly not within the exterior walls of the home, which is the definition of "Floor Area" nder Zoning Ordinance section 1.5.5(B)(1): "The sum of the floor area ... shall be taken from the exterior face of the xterior walls of each building...." The porch is outside the building envelope, that is, it is outside the exterior face of the xterior walls.

ecause our porch is outside of the exterior walls, it could only count towards FAR if it is explicitly pulled in by another rovision. Importantly, it does not meet the ordinance's definition of an "enclosed porch," since it is not "enclosed for any ortion of the year by any non-permeable material." (And again, it's not technically even a porch.) There is no other rovision that pulls the porch into the floor area.

ane ultimately deferred the decision to you.

m not one to debate the logic or fairness of the FAR concept itself; I accept that the code is the code. But I do feel that ne City's residents should be able to rely on the FAR language as it is written, as well as on the guidance of the city's hief Zoning Code Official. The ordinance's application should not be extended beyond what the words provide. As a primer litigator who has spent the last thirteen years avoiding conflict, I am confident that a legal determination would avor our interpretation — but I truly do not want this to escalate further.

have attached our approved architectural plans for your reference. The original roof design can be seen on the front levation on page 1, on the Fire Department-stamped copy. The pergola modification can be seen on page 5.

lease feel free to let me know if you would like to discuss this, either at your office or by phone. Otherwise, we look rward to your determination.

Hi, John.

'm sorry to pester you, but I'm following up on my voicemails regarding the issue below. We are anxious to receive your betermination so that we can proceed accordingly. It seems a relatively trivial matter, but it is impacting our current construction. Please let me know, of course, if there is someone else that we should direct our inquiry to.

Thank you again for your consideration.

Regards,

Jon

met with and discussed this issue with Anthony Ciccariello this morning. He explained that Inspectional Services onsiders our front porch to count towards Floor Area because it is covered by a roof. I pointed out that the Zoning Ordinance defines Floor Area only with reference to the exterior walls of the structure, with no mention of a "roof": "The um of the floor area ... shall be taken from the exterior face of the exterior walls of each building..." A roof is not relevant to the the Ordinance's definition of floor area.

Ve all agree that our porch is outside the exterior walls of the building, and we all agree with the conclusion that it is not a porch" under the Ordinance. To count it towards our home's floor area would be to extend the Ordinance beyond its plain anguage. Our architect designed our house in complete compliance with the Ordinance, and in consultation with the bity's Chief Zoning Code Official. We would really appreciate your approval of that original design.

Vhatever your decision, please provide it as soon as you are able, so that we can proceed accordingly.

hank you,

r. Hurwitz,

nave read your request and must respectfully disagree with your interpretation of section 1.5.5. For purposes of FAR, we ave counted areas such as the area in question when it meets the parameters of the "porch" definition for that which is more than 60 percent enclosed by impermeable walls, attached to and accessible from the primary structure, and not neated or air conditioned."

f you want to appeal that decision you may do so by filing for an Appeal of the interpretation of the Commissioner to the Zoning Board of Appeals. You may also apply for a Special Permit for relief of FAR.
