Guidance counselors are knowledgeable professionals who work collaboratively with teachers, administrators, one another and the larger Newton South community on behalf of your child and family. Upon entering Newton South, students are assigned to a house and counselor who will remain until graduation. Siblings are also assigned to the same counselor and house.

Counselors are advisors and primary support for students. They work with students individually or in groups, focusing on developmental issues, academic planning and course selection, personal matters of concern, and the college and post-high school transition process. Assisting students to achieve their maximum potential academically, while encouraging social and extracurricular experiences, is a major focus of our work. Above all, counselors seek to promote healthy development in all students at South.

As support for students and their families, we are often the first person a parent or guardian with questions or concerns. Please note that we respect the confidentiality of the relationship with students. We seek to understand the expectations and concerns parents have for their children and advise accordingly.

In addition to guidance counselors, Newton South has other specialists available to meet with students, including a Prevention/Intervention Counselor, School Psychologist and College Counselor. We also have a METCO counselor who advises our Boston students.

As a general rule for parents, if you have a question or concern about your child, please contact us. If we're unable to answer your questions, we'll direct you to someone who can.

Please RSVP as soon as possible.

We look forward to full attendance for this important meeting
